On the Edge Krupa is a stunning waterfall located in Plitvice Lakes National Park in Croatia. The waterfall is part of the Lower Lakes group of waterfalls, and it is one of the most popular tourist attractions in the park. The waterfall is named after the Krupa River, which flows over the edge of a cliff to form the waterfall.

Geography

On the Edge Krupa is located in the southern part of Plitvice Lakes National Park, near the village of Plitvice Selo. The waterfall is about 25 meters high and 100 meters wide. The Krupa River flows over the edge of a cliff into a pool of water below. The pool is surrounded by lush vegetation, including trees, shrubs, and flowers.

Geology

The On the Edge Krupa waterfall is formed by the erosion of limestone rock. The limestone was deposited millions of years ago by a shallow sea that covered the area. Over time, the sea receded and the limestone was exposed to the elements. Rainwater and groundwater dissolved the limestone, creating a series of caves and tunnels. The Krupa River flows through one of these tunnels and emerges at the edge of the cliff, forming the waterfall.

Ecology

The On the Edge Krupa waterfall is home to a variety of plants and animals. The lush vegetation surrounding the waterfall provides food and shelter for many different species. The pool of water below the waterfall is home to fish, frogs, and other aquatic creatures. The waterfall is also a popular nesting site for birds.

Tourism

On the Edge Krupa is a popular tourist attraction in Plitvice Lakes National Park. The waterfall can be reached by a series of hiking trails. The trails are well-maintained and offer stunning views of the waterfall and the surrounding area. Visitors can also take a boat ride to the base of the waterfall.

On the Edge Krupa is a stunning waterfall that is a must-see for any visitor to Plitvice Lakes National Park. The waterfall is a beautiful example of the natural beauty of Croatia, and it is a great place to relax and enjoy the scenery.
