But have you ever wondered about the stories behind these hymns? Who wrote them? What inspired them? What do the lyrics mean?

In this article, we will take a journey through the history and meanings of our Latter-day hymns. We will learn about the people who wrote them, the events that inspired them, and the profound truths they teach.

The Early Hymns

The first hymns of the Latter-day Saint movement were written by the Prophet Joseph Smith and his associates. These hymns were simple and heartfelt, and they expressed the faith and hope of the early Saints.

One of the most famous of these early hymns is "The Spirit of God." This hymn was written by Joseph Smith in 1830, during a time of great persecution for the Church. The lyrics of the hymn express the Saints' confidence in the power of God's Spirit to sustain them through their trials.

Another early hymn that is still sung today is "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet." This hymn was written by W.W. Phelps in 1836, after the Saints had been driven from their homes in Missouri. The lyrics of the hymn express the Saints' gratitude for the Prophet Joseph Smith and for the blessings of the gospel.
