Once you have done your research, you will need to identify the players that you want to target for your lineup. There are a few factors to consider when choosing players, including:

- Position: Each player has a specific position (e.g., point guard, shooting guard, small forward, power forward, center). You will need to select players from each position to create a balanced lineup.
- Salary: Each player has a salary, which is the amount of money that it will cost you to add them to your lineup. You will need to stay under the salary cap when building your lineup.
- Stats: The stats that a player has accumulated over the course of the season can give you an idea of their potential for DFS. Look for players who have been consistent producers in terms of points, rebounds, assists, steals, and blocks.
- Matchup: The matchup that a player has can also impact their potential for DFS. Look for players who have favorable matchups against weak opponents.

Once you have identified the players that you want to target, you will need to build your lineup. There are a few different strategies that you can use when building your lineup, including:

- Stars and scrubs: This strategy involves selecting a few high-priced players (stars) and filling out the rest of your lineup with low-priced players (scrubs). The goal of this strategy is to maximize your upside potential while minimizing your risk.
- Balanced lineup: This strategy involves selecting a mix of high-priced and low-priced players. The goal of this strategy is to create a lineup that is well-rounded and has a good chance of scoring points in all categories.
- Contrarian lineup: This strategy involves selecting players who are not popular picks. The goal of this strategy is to differentiate your lineup from the field and increase your chances of winning.

No matter which strategy you choose, there are a few general tips that you should keep in mind when building your lineup:

- Consider the game slate: The game slate is the list of games that are taking place on a given day. When building your lineup, you should consider the matchups and the players who are available to play.
- Use a variety of positions: Each player has a specific position, and you will need to select players from each position to create a balanced lineup.
- Stay under the salary cap: The salary cap is the amount of money that you have to spend on your lineup. You will need to stay under the salary cap when building your lineup.
- Don't be afraid to make changes: The NBA is a fluid league, and injuries and other factors can impact the value of players. Don't be afraid to make changes to your lineup if you think it will improve your chances of winning.

Bankroll management is one of the most important aspects of daily fantasy basketball. You need to manage your bankroll carefully in order to avoid going broke. Here are a few tips for managing your bankroll:

- Set a budget: Before you start playing DFS, you should set a budget for yourself. This will help you avoid spending more money than you can afford to lose.
- Don't chase losses: If you lose a few games in a row, don't try to chase your losses by entering more contests. This is a surefire way to go broke.
- Withdraw your winnings: When you win a contest, withdraw your winnings and add them to your bankroll. This will help you build your bankroll and increase your chances of winning in the future.

Daily fantasy basketball can be a great way to make money and have fun. However, it is important to approach the game with a sound strategy and a well-managed bankroll. By following the tips in this guide, you can increase your chances of success in DFS.
